PAUL HASSINK's plan[1] to implement a Texas-style utility plan will make some of his friends rich but cost Oklahomans: [2]

Billions of dollars in higher utility costs and[3]

Result in less reliable power, including blackouts[4]

Paul Hassink's plan would be profitable for his former co-workers in the utility industry, but raise your utility rates.[2]

It's no wonder he has refused to sign the Anti-Corruption Pledge and would be another rubber stamp for Kevin Stitt's corruption.[5]
